SWAHILI: A DONOR LANGUAGE¹

SERGIO BALDI

ABSTRACT: Sergio Baldi. Swahili: A Donor Language. Lingua Posnaniensis, vol. LIII (1)/2011. The Poznań Society for the Advancement of the Arts and Sciences. PL ISSN 0079-4740, ISBN 978-83-7654-140-2, pp. 7–24.

Swahili is a Bantu language, more specifically a member of the Sabaki subgroup of North East Coast Bantu. Swahili was first written in Arabic script, in which there are manuscripts dating back to the early 18th century. A Roman alphabet which is now standard was introduced during the colonial period, although some Swahili-speaking Muslims continue to use Arabic script, especially in private correspondence. The cultural importance of Islam is reflected in the large number of loanwords from Arabic. Swahili is the national language in Tanzania and Kenya and largely spoken in the nearby countries. It has also an important role as a donor language in East Africa and Central Africa, not only to other Bantu idioms, but also to other languages belonging to different linguistic families.

Sergio Baldi, Università degli Studi di Napoli: "L'Orientale", sbaldi@iuo.it

Swahili is one of the most studied African languages, as we can see from its very rich bibliographies (VAN SPAANDONCK 1965; MIONI 1967; BOUCNEAU 1987; BALDI 1991). Many studies have been published on all aspects of the language, some of them dealing with Arabic influence and loans. But one aspect, which has not been considered up to now, is the role of Swahili as a donor language in East and Central Africa, not only to other Bantu idioms, but also to other neighbouring languages belonging to different linguistic families.

This paper is intended to investigate the spread of these Swahili loans in neighbouring languages, which got so many loans from Swahili. The survey is based on the analysis of words from some Bantu languages such as: Gikuyu, Lingala, Luganda, Nyakyusa, Shona as well as from languages belonging to different linguistic groups: Acholi, Bari, Madi, Pokot, Rendille, etc.

In the list given here, there are some Swahili words, which were lent to some east African languages. Most of these words were loans, mainly from Arabic, via Swahili. These items coming from my data base are collected from dictionaries and some other material, I came in contact with during my researches. The work, considering the enormous amount of work in progress in the field of African languages, is just a preliminary inquiry in topics not so well investigated.

¹ I would like to thank Mrs Fatuma Tandika, lettice for Swahili at the Università degli Studi di Napoli "L'Orientale", for help and advice. Swahili words followed by an * are given by her and not found in consulted dictionaries.

Here are some examples:

⁵ JOHNSON (1939: 20b) suggests a Turkish origin.

⁶ This loan could have arrived directly from English.

⁷ JOHNSON (1939: 31a) suggests also a possible Persian origin.

⁸ I think SACLEUX’ (1939: 98a) etymology from Portuguese is more reliable than that one given by JOHNSON (1939: 31a): “? the same word through Arabic”.

¹³ KNAPPERT (1972–1973: 293, note 18) affirme: “La forme hausa bindiga vient d’un terme de la Lingua franca désignant le fusil venediga; ce mot, en portugais ou en espagnol, est la forme adjetivale de Venise, ancien port de transbordement d’armes à feu”. Le mot en luganda est un emprunt au swahili bunduki, “itself a loan from Turkish via Arabic. The origin of this word is the Greek pontikòn (hazelnut), referring to the shape of a musket bullet. The Ganda form of the word can be explained by the “law of Meinhoff”, which states that the first of two consecutive voiced pre-nasalized plosive consonants must become a nasal. The loss of the last syllable is already found in Luo bunde; the Nilotic languages prefer words of one or two syllables” (KNAPPERT 1999: 209).

Swahili bure a./adv. ‘useless; free; empty’ > Dholuo bure adv. ‘for nothing’;

Swahili bushuti [? < Arabic *basāt*¹⁴ ‘covering’] ‘a long cloak worn by some men, decorated with goldd threadwork’ > Luganda būsuuti ‘Arab robe used by certain chiefs on ceremonial occasions’;

²⁴ See BAKHRESSA 1992: 282a.

²⁵ KNAPPERT (1999: 206) says: “The Luganda word èppeesà (a button) is derived from Swahili pesa (a coin, money) via Hindustani from Portuguese pesa. The ultimate origin of the word is again Latin, i.e. pensa (a weight) from pendere (to hang). That the word has travelled to East Africa via India is proved by its shape: if it had come directly from Portuguese, it would have been pronounced with a “z” instead of “s” – compare Swahili meza (table) via Portuguese mesa from Latin mensa. In Hindustani, this type of “z” is identified with the s- phoneme.”

This list of 268 Swahili words was quite productive in giving loans in a few East African languages. Among them we can see from Table I that the highest stock was formed by Arabic loans, followed by Bantu words and English loans.

Table 1

Arabic	? Arabic	Persian	Hindi	Turkish	English	Port.	Bantu
160	11	4	2	1	26	5	59

From Table II we can observe that the highest number of loans from Swahili is in Gikuyu, Luganda and Rendille, where the majority of items is concentrated.

³¹ The word is a loan from another Swahili word, ulaya ‘a land, esp. if not further defined, Europe; district’, which always comes from the same Arabic wilāya (WEHR 1966: 1100b).

³² In Swahili the word itself is a loan from Arabic wīn (?) according to Johnson.

Table 2

Languages	< Ar	< ? Ar	< Per	< Hindi	< Turk	< En	< Port	< Bantu	Total
Acooli	11	2	1	2		1	1	9	27
Ateso	1	1	1					5	8
Bari	2			1		1		1	5
Dholuo	16	2	2	1		19	2	5	47
Gikuyu	106	4	2				2	5	119
Lingala	7	1							8
Luena	4					2		11	17
Luganda	58	3	1				4	8	74
Madi	23		1	2	1	3	1	6	37
Nyakyusa	28		1		1		1	2	33
Pokot	18						1	3	22
Rendille	27	2	2			2		23	56
Shona	3								3
Xhosa	1								1

At last, if we analyze the material collected from a grammatical point of view, we can observe that most of Swahili loanwords are nouns. The verbs are very few: -badilisha; -fikiri; -funga; -koroga; -pima; -roga; -silmisha; -soma; -thubutu and two of them -fikiri and -koroga are no more verbs respectively in Gikuyu and Rendille.

As it regards the other aspects of grammar we have really few adjectives, inter alia, only the first two are still considered adjectives in the languages lent: -geni; -takatifu; chafu; -faransa; bure; rahisi; sahihi; laghai; and one item, respectively, as an adverb, labda, as a conjunction, basi, and as an interjection, hayy.
