

STUDIA CELTICA POSNANIENSIA: EDITORIAL POLICY

Review Process

Contributions are subject to a double-blind peer review process supervised by the editorial board and the advisory board. The review procedure should take no longer than three months after which time authors are notified of:

- acceptance of the paper
- acceptance of the paper after minor revisions as recommended by the reviewers
- rejection of the submission.

If the proposal requires major revision, as recommended by the reviewers, the author is kindly asked to make the recommended revisions or explain in a separate letter to the editor-in-chief or in the text of the article itself why the recommended changes are not accepted by them. The editor-in-chief will take the final decision as to whether the proposal can be published without the recommended revisions.

The content of the reviews will be made available to the authors of paper proposals.